A RATTLESNAKE INDUSTRY.

ome Account of a Queer Business as How a Man Makes a Living by It.

Isaac Davis, of Noth Bolton, the rattlesnake hunter, has added upward of 900 snakes to his score, making more than 1,700 rattlesnakes he has killed since he commenced snake-killing for the bounty of 25 cents a snake and two the bounty of 25 cents a snake and two months' wages a year at $50 a month four years ago. One hundred and flifty of the Fall's catch were killed in three days on a new (den which he discovered on the mountain west of Sabbath Day Point. These he killed as they were gathering on the den in October for their winter's hiberanation—75 the first day, 45 the second and 30 on the third. Dayis says he lost considerable money the first year of his snake-hunting by not knowing that there was market for the skins and rattles, as well as for the oil. The skins he sells at from 25 cents to $2 each, to be dressed into leather for ladies belts, slippers, &c., and the rattles are mounted as jewelry for pins, carrings and the like, and brings from 25 cents to $1 a string. The oil brings 25 cents per ounce, and a big, fat snake will sometimes yield an oance. The hunting season is in the spring as they are leaving the den, and in the antumn as they gather for the winter. When they come out they assemble in intertwined groups of from there or four to fifteen, lying in the sun until they collect energy for their summer's jaunt in pairs to breed. In the fall they come back, he says, apparently in families, the old ones with from 10 to 15 or 20 young ones, a foot or more in length. Davis is the only professional rattlesnake hunter in the world. He has been engaged by the owners of Summer cottages to hunt for a month Spring and Fall next year, as he has for the past four years, at $50 a month, and this pay, with the bounty and proceeds of the oil, skins and rattles, occasional live snakes sold, and income earned by shipping and handling the months' wages a year at $50 a month four Logan & Co.'s Excelsior Baking Powder Are proprietors of the HOMESTEAD LIVER PILLS, best pill ever used. ceeds of the oil, skins and rattles,, occasional live snakes sold, and income earned by shipping and handling the reptiles at county fairs in August and September, makes him a respectable income. He devotes his winters to reading, and now and then a day's work as a chopper. He says the snakes on his side of the lake are growing visibly scarcer, and thinks that they can be ultimately exterminated. Day's very quietly admits the hazard of his occupation and coolly says he "presumes likely he will get bitten some time and like enough die from the effects if a blood vessel happens to be hit."
